Legislative Update

To the members of our Minute Man Movement:
 It's my pleasure to provide you with this edition of the ROA Up to the Minute Man Update. ROA national has been relentlessly representing readiness here in Washington, D.C. However, before giving you the "play by play," I must first tell you about the amazing vacation I had in Iceland this past week.
 If you have not yet been to Iceland, I recommend you change your travel plans immediately. I arrived in Reykjavik, Iceland's capital, at 0600 GMT on Easter Monday.
 My first goal was to acquire a warm base layer, which I did at an Icelandic franchise called Icewear. Thankfully, Icewear was one of the few stores open on Easter Monday. It was there (and throughout the week) that I learned about the insulating capability of merino wool.
 After two days of exploring downtown Reykjavik and the attractions of the nearby surrounding area (including a geothermal spa), my travels took me six hours southwest to the largest glacier in Europe: Vatnajökull.
 After putting micro spikes and crampons on my hiking boots, I explored one of the glacier's ice caves and traversed its many crevasses until I reached its approximately 7,000 foot high peak.
